May Water Use "Dashboard" and Water Conservation News

Click here for the May water use update. The first residential sample bills showing water usage for Phase I metered residences were sent out in April and May. Residents with leaks are often surprised by their sample bills and have difficulty believing their water consumption is as high as reported. For example, a 1/8-inch leak in an old pipe can waste 114,200 gallons of water per month. The sample bills and meter data are giving residents and City employees information to support cooperative efforts to identify leaks and address water conservation issues.

The City Water Conservation Program staff can compile data and graphs of metered water usage, including hourly consumption amounts, to help determine whether leaks are occurring. These efforts may be followed by site visits to help homeowners troubleshoot sources of water waste. These site visits have already led to a monthly water savings of 458,856 gallons associated with the identification and repair of major residential water leaks, including corroded service laterals, running toilets, water softeners and leaking irrigation systems.

Visit the City's Water Conservation web page for water use data from previous months and for summer water tips, including a general lawn watering guide for Woodland.
